ABOUT twenty years ago, when I got Percival's collection of Tamil proverbs into my hands, I had only been a short time in India, and had as yet got no insight into Indian thought and literature. I had read only a couple of small Tamil story books, but when reading these I had already perceived that the Indians could hardly tell a story without introducing some proverbs into it. My attention was thus at an early period of my life in India drawn to proverbs, and I began to study Percival's collection. I got, however, very little out of my study, as Percival had only given a translation of the Tamil proverbs, and had given no hints as to their meaning. So in those days I got no insight whatever into the real household proverbs, but had almost to rest satisfied with the many aphorisms, or what we in Tamil call கீதமொழி, of which we find large numbers in all our Tamil proverb collections. Yet, from what I had seen in the story books and in Percival's collection I had got an interest in these terse, blunt and poetic sayings; and year after year on getting deeper into the thought and life of India, and at the same time becoming acquainted with more and more of the proverbs, my interest in them steadily increased. And whenever I met with a new proverb either when talking with the people or reading Tamil books, I always looked for it in Percival's collection, and if he had not got it, I took a note of it; and at times I tried to have some of them explained by the common people.

While I was thus leisurely prosecuting the study of Tamil proverbs, the Rev. J. Lazarus, B.A., began to prepare a "Dictionary of Tamil Proverbs." I looked forward to the publication of this book with very great interest, but when it appeared, I was somewhat disappointed with it, partly because Mr. Lazarus had not given a translation of the proverbs and partly because his explanation of the proverbs seemed to me, from the insight I had got into the proverbs through years of study, not always to be the right one. But the book roused my interest afresh, and I took a Tamil munshi for about three years to go through all the proverbs I had found in other collections, and those I now found in Mr. Lazarus's book, and also those I had collected myself. This study with my munshi together with the kind help I got from other Tamil people led me to a fuller understanding of Oriental proverbial literature, and after a couple of years investigation, I got the idea of publishing a collection of these beautiful national sayings. But no sooner had I began to realize the idea, than I felt how much easier it was to get an idea than to carry it out. And hundreds of times, when going on with this work, have I felt the force of the Tamil proverb: "I stepped into the water without knowing its depth."

When the idea of publishing a collection of Tamil proverbs occurred to me, I saw at once that I had great difficulties to face. I had the difficulty of two languages, both of which were foreign to me. I had the fear—and still have it—that it might be too much for a foreigner to venture on the publication of Tamil proverbs, as proverbs undoubtedly form the most difficult branch of a nation's literature to comprehend. Besides this, it was clear to me that if I were to publish Tamil proverbs, I could not adopt the usual alphabetical order, but would have to arrange them into groups. Another difficulty—and without comparison the most important one—was to get the proper meaning of the proverbs, not as some pandits may please to explain them, but as common men and women understand them, when they use them in their every day life. Another difficulty, again, was to have these thousands of proverbs before me sifted. What was to be taken, and what to be left out? It always seemed to me that our collections of proverbs suffered from a great evil, viz., that they contained too many useless sayings, too many aphorisms and too many repetitions of the same proverbs.

With these difficulties before me I started, hoping that the proverb would prove true: "Little strokes at last fell great oaks," or as we say in Tamil: "Stroke upon stroke will make even a grindstone creep."

When going into the study of Tamil proverbs one finds that little has been done in the way of making a scientific investigation of them. All proverbs, sayings and aphorisms we meet with in our Tamil proverb collections we generally call Tamil proverbs, but these two terms—Tamil and Proverbs—raise two great questions: Are they all Tamil originally, and are they all proverbs? When comparing the Tamil proverbs with the Telugu ones, we find a good number almost word for word the same. And I remember when once walking with a friend in the streets of Poona, that he quoted two Marathi proverbs, both of which we have literally in Tamil. At Bombay I once happened to look into a Marathi proverb collection, and when I asked for a translation of the first proverb in the book I found it to be ours: “The dancing girl, who could not dance, said that the hall was not big enough.” But which is which in our Tamil proverb collections. They are all called Tamil.

Again, is it right to insert in our collections of proverbs hundreds and hundreds of aphorisms, classical sayings (கீதிமொழி) and common sayings, when these only communicate a truth in a general way, without making use of any sort of illustration? It seems to me that we should not allow “the confusion of proverbs with mere precepts or maxims destitute of proverbial significance and character” to go on. Each in its proper place. I have not left them out altogether, but tried to insert only such as are common, and at the same time contain rare words or idiomatic phrases.

To show what I mean by aphorisms and precepts, I shall quote a few here:—கண்டவன் எடானோ?—உயிருள்ளமட்டும் தைரியம் விடலாமா?—முதலிலே கெட்டிக்காரன் முடிவிலே சோம்பேறி.—வேலை அதிகம் சம்பளம் கொஞ்சம்.—இச்சித்த காரியம் இரகசியமல்லவே.—கள்ளனுக்கு ஊர் எல்லாம் பகை.—குடித்தனம் ஒன்றுபண்ணினால், நன்மை வரும் தீமை வரும்.—கேட்டவை எல்லாம் நம்பாதே, நம்பினதெல்லாம் சொல்லாதே.—தீமைபேசுகிறவன் தீமையாளிதான்.—புதிய காரியங்களில் புதிய யோசனை வேண்டும்.—தரும்த்தைப் பாவம் வெல்லாது.—இருவராலே ஆகாத காரியம் ஒருவராலே ஆகுமா?—செலவு அதிகம் வரவு போதாது.

Here are a few more of the same kind, but a little more classical in their grammar:—குணமில்லாத வித்தை எல்லாம் அவித்தை.—திரக்கற்றவன் தேகின் ஆவான்.—பழிக்கு ஆனோர் சிலர், பழிபடுவோர் சிலர்.—உருவத்தினாலேயல்ல இன்பப்பேச்சினால் கிளி நன்குமதிக்கப்படும்.—உதிரத்துக்கு அல்லவோ உருக்கம் இருக்கும்.—அறம் பொருள் இன்பம் எல்லாருக்குமில்லை.—நியாயைச்சேர்ந்து ஒழுகல் தீது, நியாயர் பண்ணெய்வனவும் தீது.—சொல்லும் சொல் ஆக்கமும் கேடும் தரும்.—நல்ல நினைவை அனுசரித்தலே கெட்ட நினைவை நீக்கல்.—குலஸ்திரீ தன் பர்த்தாவையும், பரஸ்திரீ தன் மேனியையும் பேணுதார். இல்லறமல்லது, நல்லறமன்று. மனையான் விடியுமுன் எழுந்து வீட்டுப்பணி செய்வான்.—But where would be end of it, if these were to be passed off as proverbs? A fine collection, quite a Mahabharata, might be made out of them. The literature of India abounds in them. From the Mahabharata, Hitopadesa, ஓவையார் and other books, we could easily get a beautiful collection of aphorisms and sayings counted by thousands.

Many of the proverbs met with in books have so often been handled by pandits, that we meet with the same proverb in a number of forms. The same is the case with a number of proverbs, which, just because they are in common use all over the country, have become slightly altered when wandering about the country from place to place and from caste to caste. As they are in spite of slight changes the same proverb, they ought either to be put down together or references ought to be made from one to the other, as Captain Carr has tried to do in his collection of Telugu proverbs. If this is not done, they cannot but give the inexperienced student of proverbs a great deal of trouble; and to me they have been a real worry, as I had to find them all out, in order that I might not in this collection repeat two proverbs that are the same. Here are a few examples of this kind :—

கண்ணில் குத்தின விரலை கண்டிப்பார் உண்டோ = கண்ணில் பட்ட கையைத் தறிப்பாரில்லை = கைதப்பிக் கண்ணில் பட்டால் கையைத் கண்டிப்பதுண்டா = கைவிரல் கண்ணில்பட்டால் கையை என்ன பண்ணலாம் = விரல் கண்ணில் குத்தினது என்று வெட்டிப்போடுவார்களா = விழியிலே குத்தின விரலை அறுப்பாருண்டா.—அம்பட்டன் குப்பையைக் கிளறினால் மயிர்மயிராய்ப் புறப்படும் = கிண்டக் கிண்ட அம்பட்டன் குப்பை மயிரே புறப்படும்.—அமாவாசைப் பருக்கை என்றைக்கும் அகப்படுமா = நித்தியம் கிடைக்குமா அமாவாசைச்சோறு.—அப்பிடாவுமில்லை வெட்டுக்கத்தியுமில்லை = அவனுக்குக் கப்படாவுமில்லை வெட்டுக்கத்தியுமில்லை = கப்படாவுமில்லை வெட்டக் கத்தியுமில்லை.—உடம்பு முழுதும் நனைந்தவருக்குக் கூதல் என்ன = அற நனைந்தவருக்குக் கூதல் என்ன = முட்ட நனைந்தார்க்குக் குளிரில்லை = முழுதும் நனைந்தவருக்கு ஈரமில்லை = முற்றும் நனைந்தவருக்கு ஈரம் ஏது.—இருந்தும் கெடுத்தான் செத்தும் கெடுத்தான் = நிருவாய்த்தான் இருந்தும் கெடுத்தான் செத்தும் கெடுத்தான் = சேவரத்துச் கிராமணி இருந்தும் கெடுத்தான் செத்தும் கெடுத்தான் = சேயுரத்துப் பன்னி செத்தும் கெடுத்தான் இருந்தும் கெடுத்தான்.—கடவிலே ஏற்றம் போட்ட கதை = சமுத்திரத்தில் ஏற்றம் போட்டதுபோல், = சமுத்திரத்தில் ஏற்றம்போட்டுத் தண்ணீர் இறைத்தாற்போல்.—வேலையற்ற அம்பட்டன் மகளைப் பிடித்துச் சிறைத்தானம் = வேலையில்லாத அம்பட்டன் ஆட்டைச் சிறைத்தானம் = மினைக்கெட்ட அம்பட்டன் பூனையைச் சிறைத்தானம்

ததும்பாது=குறைகுடம் தனம்பும் நிறைகுடம் தனம்பாது = குறைகுடம் கூத்

றியா, ஊர் மெச்சப் பால் குடிக்கிறியா.—நிழல் நல்லது முசிறு பொல்லா
தது = மரம் நல்லதுதான் முகடு கெட்டது.

The above are only a few examples of the many repetitions of the very same proverb.

There is another way of changing a proverb, viz., by putting the second half of a proverb at the beginning, so that we get two proverbs out of one. As an instance:—பட்ட காலிலே படும், கெட்ட குடியே கெடும், changed into:—கெட்ட குடியே கெடும் பட்டகாலிலே படும்; இருந்தகால் மூதேவி, நடந்தகால் சீதேவி, changed into:—நடந்த காலிலே சீதேவி, இருந்த காலிலே மூதேவி.

As my aim in making this collection has been practical rather than scientific, I have not tried to solve all these difficulties in any other way than by trying my best to avoid all repetitions. But with reference to this there is much for any one to do who would try to give us a scientific collection of Tamil proverbs. In such a work we should also expect to see what we call Tamil proverbs sifted, so that we might learn where they have originated, as in a good English collection of proverbs we can see where each had its origin—in Greece, in Italy, in Spain, in Germany or elsewhere.

This collection of proverbs is a selection from the thousands that are given in our Tamil proverb collections, and also from the many I have come across when reading Tamil books and conversing with Tamil people. Though I feel sure that there are a good number of real household proverbs I have not given that ought to be in such a collection as this, I am at the same time convinced that there cannot be very many. Once a man gave me 200 proverbs which he had collected at Madura, but among them all I found only two new ones which were not more or less a repetition of what I had.

The Tamil proverb collections from which I have got help are:—A bazaar book containing about 2,000 proverbs without any English. உவமைச்சொல் அகராதி, a collection of about 5,000 Tamil proverbs published in 1872, which is with reference to real household proverbs, far superior to Percival's. The book is out of print but can be seen in our public libraries. Then there is Percival's collection of about 6,000 proverbs with an English translation. A very useful little "Handbook of Tamil Proverbs and Phrases" was published in 1888 by Mr. P. Satya Nesan, B.A., containing 500 proverbs only, but with translation, application and many similar English proverbs. The last collection that appeared was Mr. Lazarus's "Dictionary of Tamil Proverbs." This book is now the largest collection we have, and so far it makes its predecessors superfluous. Mr. Lazarus has not translated the proverbs, but to every one he has given a hint as to its meaning.

The other books from which I have chiefly drawn are the Tamil story books and Sastras. Of such I shall mention a few: கதாமஞ்சரி, கதாசிந்தாமணி, பஞ்சதந்திரம், கிளிக்கதை, முப்பத்திரண்டு பதுமைகதை. Pandit S. M. Natesa Sastri's "Folklore in Southern India," which has a number of proverbs and Tamil stories to illustrate them. A magazine published some years ago called: "The Saguna Bodhini Series." A book called இராமநாடகம் is, though written in poetry, full of proverbs. This is still more the case with "Vinoda Rasamanjari" by A. Viraswami Chettiar, late Pandit in the Madras Presidency College. This book is simply interwoven with Tamil Proverbs. "Mathar Neethy" is another story book containing many fine proverbs; and the same may be said of a book called: குடும்பசுந்தரகணி. "The Viveka Chintamani," a monthly magazine, published by Mr. C. V. Swaminatha Iyer in Triplicane, has for the last year had a number of Tamil proverbs with Tamil explanation in every issue. The Sastras translated from Sanskrit into Tamil contain hardly any proverbs except the Mahabharata. This royal storehouse of something of everything that India has produced contains a good number of proverbs interspersed throughout the huge volume. So even with reference to proverbs the Bengali proverb almost holds good: "What is there after the Mahabharata?"

Dear as these beautiful little proverbs are to Tamil people, I have for years wondered that so little has been done to make them known to Europeans, specially to European ladies, who have, or, at least, could have, so much influence with Indian women. Percival gave a translation to his collection and left it there. But a mere translation of a real proverb will not in most cases bring us into contact with its homely meaning. Take as an instance Percival's:—இளையாள் இலை தின்னி, மூத்தாள் காய் அறிவாள், translated: "the younger sister feeds on leaves, the elder is accustomed to fruit;" in this case the translation is wrong, but even if it were translated properly, it would have no meaning to a European. As Percival says, "In many instances the application has equally puzzled both myself and others to whom I have applied for information." To be sure, there's the rub in trying to explain proverbs. And consequently Percival left out the application, although he says that foreigners destined to spend the best part of their life among the Tamil people will find their proverbs of inestimable value. But in many cases a Tamil proverb without its application is to a foreigner almost like an unbroken cocoanut to a dog, as the Tamil saying is. Mr. P. Satya Nesan in his collection began in the right way, but did not go far enough; Mr. J. Lazarus, on the other hand, had his thoughts chiefly directed on collecting all the Tamil proverbs into one book. Hence Tamil proverbs as such have hitherto been handed over to us like a chaos.

My desire, as I have already indicated, has been first to make the application of each proverb clear, and next to divide them into families. As far as I have succeeded in grasping the meaning, so far almost have I succeeded, I suppose, in getting them into their proper families. But it is hard to get such a register of sin, as proverbs almost are, into a systematic order. The phenomena of sinful life are so manifold, and the reflections on it so numerous that the difficulties sometimes seemed to me insurmountable. Be it remembered, that as long as I was working at the arranging of them I had not at hand the English index nor the two glossaries and the many references from one proverb to another, and from one family to another, that are now before the reader. But in spite of all the difficulties and drawbacks, it seems to me that it is only when we have arranged the proverbs in groups or families that we are able to see what the proverbs teach us. I do not look upon the arrangement introduced by me as at all final. Far from it. What I have done I wish to be considered a beginning only, or a little attempt at cultivating the ground. Many of the proverbs are imperfectly explained, partly because their meaning has not been fully grasped, and partly because many of them to be well understood ought to have a little story attached to them. They might be divided into more families, and all the minor families might again be grouped into main families, as I have tried to do at the beginning of the book, and also at the end of it.

As the result of bringing the proverbs into groups, though I have in many cases not achieved what I have aimed at, one can easily get an insight into the social, ethical or domestic thoughts contained in them. Take as an instance the family on fate and fortune. There may within this family be a few that would have fitted in better somewhere else, and in some other family may be a few that might have been inserted under fate and fortune; but one can at once by the help of the arrangement of the book get an insight into what the Tamil proverbs teach on such a subject. I have also observed that the dividing of the proverbs into families is a great advantage in the study of the Tamil language itself. Though each proverb in a family may be said to harp on one and the same string, the thought is expressed in a variety of terms, some of which are synonymous. Look for instance at the family on ostentation or ஹம்ஸம்—one of the chief Indian sins, according to the proverbs at least—in what a variety of language is vanity rebuked! Another advantage of the family arrangement is that as a number of similar proverbs are brought together, they need less explanation; for apart from a few that are misplaced, the heading of each chapter—though in many cases it has been difficult to find an adequate heading—gives the key to the meaning of all that are included under it. It is a matter of consequence that though the proverbs in each family allude to the same thing, they are in most cases not synonymous. In the chapter on a mother, it is at once evident that most of the proverbs have little or nothing connecting them but this, that they refer to a mother. In the same chapter we get also a good insight into the way in which India regards a mother in all her capacities. In an hour's time one can by studying the chapter on a mother get some real knowledge of her position in India,—a knowledge which one could hardly get from any other sources. The references from one number to another all through the book are not to be taken as references to synonymous proverbs. This holds good in a few cases, but more often the references mean only that the reader would do well to compare the particular proverb with another, because they are closely related in thought or in language. As related individual proverbs are referred to each other, so are whole families referred to each other by the numbers given below the different chapters.

In selecting English equivalents for the Tamil proverbs I have used the following books:—W. Carew Hazlitt's "English Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases." "A Handbook of Proverbs," which is a republication of Ray's collection of English Proverbs. Captain Carr's "Telugu Proverbs." A collection of Marathi Proverbs. And "Eastern Proverbs and Emblems" by the Rev. J. Long.

A few words on the characteristics of Indian proverbs compared with the English, as they have struck me while working on them, may not be out of place, though I have not made a study of this subject.

When going through an English collection of proverbs, one is struck by the number of proverbs referring to the weather and the seasons. India has very few proverbs of this kind. In India we have the South-West monsoon from May to October, and the North-East monsoon from November to April, and there is the end of it. The characteristic of the weather in England is change, while in India it is regularity. It would be thoroughly out of place in India to say:—"A woman's mind and winter wind change oft." For the big chapter in this book on "Sorrow and lamentation of women" I could hardly find any equivalent from the English. The English woman has been respected, while her Indian sister has met with very little respect, hence her lamentation, and her revolting in bitter terms against her oppressors. Again, in India we have no girls or young ladies. We meet in India with female children and wives, as the Indian woman passes at once from being a child to being a wife. But in Europe young women have a fine time for their development, both physical and intellectual, before they get married. In this transition period, then, there is a rich sphere for English proverbs, but as there is no such period in India, there are no such Indian proverbs. Even a widow is not overlooked by the English proverbs, as she sometimes aspires, if possible, to marry again, but the Indian widow has no such aspiration, for she is a mere widow, a முண்டாசி, a contemptible thing! Woman's dress plays a part in English proverbs, but it is jewelry which is here the all-important thing; hence the tailor's shop plays the same part in Europe as the goldsmith's in India. In India a woman has had no trouble in dressing up in order to make an attractive appearance in Society, as her parents arranged her marriage for her while she was still a child. Even if she is a monkey—exceedingly ugly—she will be married.

The Tamil proverbs referring to vanity and ostentation outnumber the English and are at the same time very pointed. There is almost no end to the Tamil proverbs on the wicked tendency in the human race to see their enemies destroyed. Though India is saturated with superstition, it seems to me, strange to say, that we meet with more English than Tamil proverbs on superstition. The Tamil proverbs almost altogether leave out criticism of superstition, ceremonies, gods and temples, in short, all that refers to religious life. Even on caste there are comparatively few. Folly and laziness are regarded so differently by the Indians and the English that it is impossible to find English equivalents for the Tamil.

The meaning of an English and a Tamil proverb may be the same, but the habits, customs and climate have formed them so differently. As an instance, we say in Tamil: "Ears (ornamented) with palmyra-leaves are better than ears with no ornaments;" for this we might put the English:—"Better a bare foot, than no foot at all;" to go bare-footed in the Northern countries of Europe, especially in winter-time, would be very hard, but in India it is difficult to understand this English proverb, as all Indians still enjoy the great privilege of going bare-footed.

One great peculiarity about the Tamil or Dravidian proverbs is that the animals we meet with are but dumb figures brought in merely for the purpose of illustration. In the Panchatandra, on the other hand, all animals are imbued with sense and characteristics: they think, talk, move and behave in every way like man. Nay, some animals in those ancient days seem even to have been reading the Vedas. The Aryans have given life to all their animals. The Dravidians, on the contrary, seem not to have seen much in animals; in their proverbs, at least, they have not attributed anything like intellect to them, except perhaps a little to the cat. The shrewd and sensible elephant represents in Tamil proverbs outward greatness only. The gentle cow gives milk. The buffalo is for ploughing. Sheep are as stupid as their shepherd. The dog's faithfulness is unknown. Dogs, pigs and crows are dirty and greedy animals. The ass is ever obstinate, but has willingly or unwillingly to submit to hard work and hard treatment; its fate is a hard and pitiful one, indeed; in the hands of the washerman it fares as badly as the monkey in the hands of the mendicant. The doctor and medicine for the poor ass is to go and roll itself in the dust of the street. Whatever is done to an ass, it cannot become a horse; in this sense the horse is used for something great and grand. But as the animals are brought in only in order to illustrate, and not for their own sake at all, they are of little interest in this connection.

I have always been much struck with the complaining, the sighing, the groaning under the tyranny of men and of fate that underlies so many of the Indian proverbs. This is also the case with the Indian songs, hence also almost all tunes in India are full of melancholy. The triumphant tone does not pervade anything Indian. In all departments of Indian literature it is as if the goddess of the earth, Bhûmidêvi, stood personified, groaning under the burden heaped upon her. This feeling has found very strong expression in the Bhagavatgita:—

Arjuna.

Slayer of Madhu ! Yet again, this Yôg,
This Peace, derived from equanimity,
Made known by thee—I see no fixity
Therein, no rest, because the heart of men
Is unfixed, Krishna ! rash, tumultuous,
Wilful and strong. It were all one, I think,
To hold the wayward wind, as tame man's heart.

Krishna.

Hero long armed ! beyond denial, hard
Man's heart is to restrain and wavering;
Yet may it grow restrained by habit, Prince !
By want of self-command. This Yôg, I say,
Cometh not lightly to th' ungoverned : (who need it !)
But he who will be master of himself
Shall win it, if he stoutly strive thereto.

The Song Celestial.—F. ARNOLD.

But why so much ado about nothing? Why take so much trouble about these proverbs? What is the good of it? Who cares for these obsolete childish things? Perhaps some old grandmother, when telling stories to women and children inside the houses who are half asleep on their mats, may make some use of them. But we men of the nineteenth century, what on earth have we to do with obsolete proverbial literature, some may ask. My answer is that it is well known that the more a nation develops the more its proverbs die out; but though Europe has now for many hundreds of years been developing, there are many proverbs still in circulation among the different nations of Europe, and some of these proverbs will not die out as long as there is a tongue on earth to speak them. Whether we look to the West or to the East we find that figurative speech always has great influence over the masses. I suppose this was the reason why Jesus, who "knew what was in man," "spake unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them." It is interesting to observe that the latest Tamil drama: "Lilavati-Sulochana" written by an educated man, P. Sambandam, B.A., contains about a score of Tamil proverbs. If proverbs are still largely in use by the masses, if they still form a part of their daily language, used in practical life for practical purposes, it is clearly our duty to know them, if we want to exert any influence on the people.

When we read biographies of great men, we often see these great men attribute much of their greatness to their mother's influence on them in their early life. A mother, or a home, does lay the first foundation in every child's heart for its future, and in most cases the foundation laid by the mother or by the women of the home, has a most important effect on the moral life afterwards. In this case India is no exception to the rule. But from where does the Indian mother get thoughts by which to educate her children at home? When a child is naughty, or when a daughter has quarrelled with her mother-in-law and comes home, does an Indian mother in such cases in order to rebuke or comfort quote from the Bhagavatgita, or from the Upanishads? Does she from these books try to inculcate in the child's heart what the different indriyas mean? that some of them are to be subdued, others again to be developed?

The Indian mother has her own practical way at home.

Legends, stories and proverbs are her storehouse ; from these she obtains material for rebuking, for sneering, for warning, for encouraging, for comforting and for praising. The proverbs and maxims are India's practical ethics. The Indian proverbs are not antiquarian curiosities, but living and stern realities, and hence perhaps more celestial than the so-called "Celestial Songs" of the Bhagavatgita.

By a good knowledge of Indian proverbs one is enabled, as it were, to feel the moral pulse of the Indian people, and a sound insight into the proverbial literature of India is like getting a microscope by which one can look deeply into the recesses of the native heart. Nothing else can throw so much light on the daily practice of the Indians as do the proverbs. And if one could publish the obscene ones also, which often contain most striking truths, we should see still deeper into the misery of the country. But the obscene ones with which I have met in our collections, and in intercourse with the people, I have left out. I have, however, reason to believe that there are many obscene ones besides the few that I have seen and heard ; and that they are freely used by the great majority of the common people even in their children's presence. The children are often, I am told, made to laugh over them.

Proverbs are merciless in their criticism of sinful life, and they always aim at putting things right. As already said, the Indian mothers nurse their sons and daughters with them. By proverbs satire is pronounced over folly and over wickedness. By a proverb a crowd or a household is made to smile pleasantly, that otherwise might have got into a hot fight. In proverbs lies buried an endless store of criticism, encouragement, humour, sorrow and complaint, referring to all classes of mankind from the unborn child to the grey-haired veteran. And as the Hindu—and we might for that matter say the whole world—likes to hurt without hurting (சுடாமல் சடுதது), that he may not burn his own fingers, he has in the proverbial literature material by the help of which he can indirectly express his sorrow and joy, his approval or disapproval. By proverbs the shrewd and avaricious Brahmin is criticised ; the calculating and careful Chetty is held up to ridicule or indirectly praised ; the shepherd's stupidity and the kuravan's rudeness is brought out ; the ungrateful and deceitful friend is mercilessly rebuked; the life of immoral women is censured in strong terms; vanity is ridiculed; the dulness and indifference of the Pariah is sarcastically blamed. No wonder that many of the proverbs are universal in their application, for human life is much the same all the world over. Anger, pride, arrogance, selfishness, avarice, passion, dissimulation, falsehood and many more sins that keep society at a low level, are all of them universal, and it is with such that the proverbs deal.

The Rev. J. Long in his "Eastern Proverbs and Emblems" says with reference to the Chinese proverbs—he has it from "Scarborough's Chinese Proverbs":—"Used as quotations, the value of proverbs in China is immense. So used in conversation, they add a piquancy and a flavour which greatly delight the Chinese and make mutual intercourse more easy and agreeable. But it is to the missionary that the value of an extensive acquaintance with Chinese proverbs is of the highest importance. Personal experience, as well as the repeated testimony of others, make us bold to assert, that even a limited knowledge of Chinese proverbs is to him daily of inestimable value. A proverb will often serve to rouse the flagging attention of a congregation, or to arrest it at the commencement of a discourse. A proverb will often serve to produce a smile of good nature in an apparently ill-tempered audience and so to call forth a kindly feeling which did not seem before to exist. And very often a proverb aptly quoted will serve to convey a truth in the most terse and striking manner, so obviating the necessity for detached and lengthy arguments whilst they fix at a stroke the idea you are wishing to convey." The same author remarks: "Like the proverbs of Solomon (சீதமொழி), the Psalms, Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress,' and the 'Arabian Nights,' they speak in a language 'understood of the people'."

And from Archbishop Trench he quotes: "Anyone who by after-investigation has sought to discover how much our rustic hearers carry away, even from sermons to which they have attentively listened, will find that it is hardly ever the course or tenor of the argument, supposing the discourse to have contained such; but if anything has been uttered as it used so often to be by the best Puritan preachers, tersely, pointedly, epigrammatically, this will have stayed by them, while all the rest has passed away.

Great preachers to the people, such as have found their way to the universal heart of their fellows, have ever been great employers of proverbs."

Pandits when inserting proverbs in the books they have made, or in books translated by them, have often tried to refine the language in which they are expressed. They are always trying to employ big words and highflown terms, not knowing as yet that simplicity is the highest beauty. I think it is our duty, when we meet with pandit-refined proverbs to bring them back to their original form. I could give many examples of this kind, but I shall confine myself to one: பன்றியோடு இணங்கின or கடைய கன்றும் மலம் தின்னும். The common form of this proverb is: பன்றி பின் போகிற கன்றும் பீ தின்னும். பீ is not an indecent word in a Hindu home as yet. Would that no worse words were used in Hindu houses! Real life has dictated the proverbs, and as they are used in real life, so they should be quoted. Their meaning, their words and their grammar are alike practical and simple, why then dress them up in a pandit's dress? When they die, let them die; but as long as they are realities, and play an important part in the life of the nation, we should let them go in their natural simplicity, and honour them in their natural dress.

The Two Tamil Indexes.

I might perhaps be blamed for arranging the proverbs into families, because this arrangement makes it almost impossible for us to find any individual proverb, when we wish to see it. It is, however, almost equally difficult to do this with the alphabetic arrangement, if one does not happen to remember the first word, which is often no easy thing, as it may be a most insignificant word, an இந்த or அந்த or எந்த or ஒரு or any other little word which has no relation to the meaning of the proverb. I have, however, furnished the book with an index, or alphabetical glossary, containing the first word of each proverb, so that if the first word is remembered it is easy to find any proverb.

I have noticed by experience that there are words within the proverbs that by and by stick to the mind; while we forget the first word of a proverb, we remember words within it. I have therefore also provided this book with an index of words from within each proverb arranged alphabetically.

This latter glossary is given not only to help the reader to find the proverbs, but also in order to supply a vocabulary of the most important words found in them. The student who takes an interest in Tamil can easily, whenever he meets with a word in other books, or in conversation, and wishes to see how the word is used in proverbs, turn to the two indexes, find the word, and see the use of it and also its translation. As to translation, however, he may not always find direct help, as the translation of a proverb cannot but be somewhat free, if we are to get the meaning out of it by a translation.

To those who might prefer the proverbs arranged according to the letter, and not according to the spirit, the two glossaries will be of great help, as they can at once find out for themselves where the words horse, elephant, monkey, snake, poison, medicine, doctor, Brahmin, Pariah, Chetty, rain, wind, sickle, thali, husband, wife, woman, destiny and such like words appear.

I have in conclusion to express my thanks to all who have helped me in this work. My munshi, Mr. Vasudeva Pillai, has been my chief help in making the proverbs clear to me and in giving me their homely applications. He has also supplied me with a few hundreds of new proverbs, not found before in any collection I have come across. But after I had gone through the thousands of proverbs and phrases with my munshi, and as far as possible ascertained their meaning and their application, had selected those out of them that I wanted, had translated them into English, added their application, furnished some of them—about 1,500—with corresponding English proverbs, brought them into families, and made a copy of it all, there was one thing still to be done, and that was to make a thorough revision of the English part of the book. For this last, but very important part of the undertaking the Rev. A. C. Clayton of the Wesleyan Mission came to my assistance, and for the generous help he has given me I shall ever feel most grateful. For about a year and a half Mr. Clayton has almost daily worked at the revision of my English manuscripts, going over most of them twice at least. The proverbs being in a simple language, their translation ought also to be simple and plain. But it is very difficult to translate an Eastern proverb into English so that its meaning may be clearly understood and it is still more difficult to do it so that the language of the translation may be in harmony with the original in directness and simplicity. So whatever the reader finds of idiomatic beauty in the English translation and application is almost all owing to the deep interest Mr. Clayton has taken in this work and the perseverance with which he has sought to improve it.

To my great sorrow Mr. Clayton was transferred up-country at the beginning of this year. When he left there were still about 1,000 proverbs to be carried through the press, and up-country Mr. Clayton found it impossible to correct the proofs as quickly as I desired. Mr. A. Moffat, M.A., B.Sc. of the Christian College has been kind enough to help me in correcting what was still left to be carried through the press. The Rev. N. Devasahayam, B.A., of the Leipzig Mission has also kindly gone over all the proof-sheets.

TAMIL PROVERBS

GOD.

கடவுள்.

These Sentences about God are not Proverbs, but Aphorisms.

God (is our) help, or The Lord is our help.

This little sentence is put above the Title of almost every Hindu book.

கடவுள் துணை or தெய்வமே துணை are the most common. But we meet also with :

கணபதி துணை ; ஸ்ரீநாம ஜெயம் and other expressions.

1. அன்புக்கு ஒருவனே.

God is love. (Upanishad.)

2. அறியாத வன்து or மனோகாக்குக்கு எட்டாதவன்.

The unknown God, or The One that cannot be reached by mind or by words.

3. அரிது அரிது அஞ்சு எழுத்து ஊர்ந்தல்.

Exceedingly difficult it is to know the five letters.

The 'five letters' refer to famous incantation, or the highest spiritual wisdom, or God's Name.

"The best way to see divine light, is to put out thine own candle."

"Some say that eight plain hold all truth,
And some that it doth dwell in five!
No wonder that such living fools
Exalt Vishnu, and Siva praise."

By meditation on God the spiritual wisdom in man, which is unilluminated will become radiant. (Upanishad.)

Even where smoke cannot enter He can enter.

GOD AND MAN.

17. ஆகாசத்திலிருந்து அறுந்துவிட்டேன், பூமிதேவி ஏற்றுக்கொண்டான்.

Though he stands and waits with patience, with exactness grinds he all." (Tennyson.)

Each of the above three means that whatever the person addressed does, is right. There is a story that a king gave high offices to a potter, a barber and a washerman. While they were in authority, a rogue beat a poor farmer, who complained to the potter, and closed his complaint with the first of the above three proverbs. He meant to say, "It is in your power to do good, I therefore leave it all to you." The potter, fool that he was, took the proverb as a sneer at himself; and ordered the farmer to be beaten and sent away. The poor farmer then went to the barber magistrate and complained, ending his complaint with the second proverb. The barber took this as a personal insult and the farmer was again beaten. Finally the farmer went to the washerman-judge, recited his wrongs and closed his appeal for justice with the third proverb. He was again beaten for his pains. The story is a satire on the hypersensitiveness of upstarts about their humble origin.

IMITATION.

1535. அன்ன நடை நடக்கப்போய், தன் நடையும் கெட்டதுபோல.
Like the man who tried to walk like a swan, and thereby lost his own way of walking. 3325.
This proverb has a wide range of application all over the world. It is especially applicable to India where the transition from an old civilization to a new is so marked. Tamils describe a person who follows the new fashions as இரண்டாம் கெட்டான், 'He is spoiled a second time,' or திரிசங்கு ராஜா போல 'He is like king Trisanku.' Trisanku did much good to the Rishi Viswamitra, in return for which Viswamitra tried to elevate Trisanku in his mortal body to heaven. But the Gods were unwilling to receive him and a compromise had to be made between the Gods and Viswamitra, by which Trisanku was left suspended between heaven and earth. The story goes that a certain man who was headman or judge in his village quoted this proverb in order to console his younger brother after the death of their mother. The younger brother, who was a great fool, succeeded his brother in the office of headman or judge in due time, and as it was his principle to imitate the doings and sayings of his brother matters went on well for a time. But one day a man whose wife had died came to him for consolation and he, mindful of the way in which his elder brother had comforted him when their mother died, quoted the above saying adapting it to circumstances thus:—

- 1539a. உன் பெண்சாதி ஊருக்கும் எல்லாம் பெண்சாதி, எனக்கும் பெண்சாதி அல்லவா?
 Was not your wife the wife of the whole village, and was not she my wife?
 It need hardly be said that this was no consolation to the bereaved husband. The whole story is a satire of senseless imitation.

But a farmer held up his hand in such a way as to show the village headman his golden ring, signifying that a heavy bribe would be paid to him if the taxes were remitted, so the headman added the second part of the proverb—for it was more important to please the farmers of the village than to give an exact return to the collector.

I have procured and arranged these plants and trees, and then all these women come to dance for the goddess ! 1984.

The allusion is to the ceremony (pacchei poda) performed by a woman who has been possessed by a spirit (pidāri), in which a great pot is taken and ornamented with a nose, and eyes, &c., made by streaks of saffron, which she then worships under a shed made of green leaves. While she is worshipping, others naturally come to watch. If they also join in the worship, and dance before the goddess Paccheiyammāl in the pot, the woman who performs the ceremony must present half a cocoanut and some flour to the Goddess for each worshipper. This is a great expense and no benefit to her. She has the trouble, they have the advantage. "Put a snake into your bosom, and when it is warm it will sting you."

"He hath brought up a bird to pick out his own eyes."

V.B.—Mahabharata (சாந்திபர்வம்) criticizes the ungratefulness of mean people in the following terms:—“சின்ன மனிதரைச் சேர்க்கலாகாது. அவர்களால் பெரிய காரியம் ஆகமாட்டாது. தீமை முளையும்ல்லது நன்மை வீனாயாது. அவர்களுக்கு என்ன உபகாரஞ் செய்தபோதிலும், எவ்வளவு சகாயம் பண்ணினபோதிலும், இவர்களாலே செவ்வையப்பட்டோம் என்று ஒருக்காலஞ் சொல்லமாட்டார்கள். பல நாள் உதவிசெய்து ஒருநாள் உதவாவிட்டால், பலநாளுஞ் செய்த உதவி பாழாய்ப்போய், பாக்குமரம் நித்தியந் தண்ணீர் விடாமற் போனால் எப்படி வாடுமோ, அப்படிப்போல் முகம் வாடி, வம்பு வார்த்தைகளாடி அபகாரம்பண்ணுவார்கள். நமக்குப் பகையாயிருப்பவர்களுடன் உறவாடி நமது உண்மைகளை வெளியிட்டுவிடுவார்கள்.” The passage may be translated as follows:—“You must not associate with inferiors. They can accomplish no great deeds. Evil flourishes in their actions, good will not thrive. Whatever benefit we render to them, however much help we give them, they will never admit that they have been made the better for it. If we aid them for many days but omit to help on any future day, all the help that we have given will be in vain, and just as the areca-palm will wither if its daily supply of water fails, so with angry face and with much abuse, they will injure us. Making friends with our enemies, they will reveal our secrets to them.” From this it will be seen that ingratitude is in Hindu eyes a very grave sin, and though it must be confessed that gratitude is somewhat lacking to-day in India, and that the sneer that some people make about the absence of a word for ‘thanks’ or ‘gratitude’ in Tamil is not altogether unjustified, the sweeping assertion that the Hindus are ungrateful is however as false as it is sweeping!
